Call for 2019-2020 Proposals:
UC Davis Study Abroad Faculty-led Programs

INTERNSHIPS ABROAD

Internships Abroad are 4 to 8 week long, cohort-based internship programs remotely overseen by UC Davis faculty with an expertise in that subject area and/or region. Internship placements are typically coordinated by a local organization with experience handling onsite logistics, multiple internship sites, and student services. UC Davis faculty oversee the work of students in multiple locations remotely through weekly electronic communication. These remote interactions help students reflect upon and make the most of the internship opportunity. Faculty offer 2 units of credit for the remote reflection and serve as instructor of record for the internship credits which vary based on the number of internship contact hours students have.

The internships are great opportunities for students to explore interests and gain valuable work, research, and community-centered experiences. Because students receive credit for the internships, they can qualify for financial aid.

Internships are offered according to existing thematic tracks, such as “Business and Communication,” “Global Health,” “Engineering,” and “Ag Science and Sustainability,” but new tracks may be developed to accommodate different areas of work.
